OUR WHY

As our community grows, so does our impact. We need your help to continue supporting those affected by brain tumors and their families. At the National Brain Tumor Society, we offer a variety of events, each designed to create awareness, raise funds, and foster a supportive community.

Stephanie Quinn, Brain Tumor Survivor, with her husband and parents on their wedding day!

“In 2021 when I was 31 years old, I was diagnosed with terminal brain cancer and given a short timeline to watch my life pass through. I had a successful awake craniotomy at UT Southwestern in Dallas, followed by treatment with a new clinical trial drug that's kept my quarterly MRI scans surprisingly clean. I was told that the tennis-ball size of my tumor meant that I was probably a cancer patient since I was around 16 years old. Terminal brain tumors like this are becoming more and more common for young people like me, and it makes "quality versus quantity" an intensely serious question when you're still supposed to be wondering who to marry, if you want children, and at what age you'll retire. My future still holds brain radiation, chemotherapy, and possibly further surgery when the tumor decides the clinical trial drug isn't strong enough anymore. While this diagnosis has given my life an overwhelming purpose to advocate and raise funds for a life-saving treatment through organizations like NBTS, it's also a massive cry for help from over 20,000 people in the United States alone who will die from a brain tumor every year. In 2026, there's still no solution. Let's answer the call and find one!”

Supporting this event enables crucial progress toward better treatments and outcomes for patients like Stephanie and all of those affected by brain tumors.
